

I believe that large phone companies should be subject to regulatory review of their broadband pricing to independent ISPs. I have enjoyed the service of independent ISPs such as Sonic.net for many years now. The level of service I have received as a customer of an independent ISP far surpasses the inadequate customer support provided by large phone companies.